

How to work from your home?

In case you don't have a company laptop with pre-configured logins to the company network, ask the system administrators of your employer to install remote control possibilities. The most secure way should be a VPN connection to the company network with user / password logins and then remote desktop connections to your work computer or user session and data.

As this needs quite a bit of preparation and is quite expensive, especially for small companies, a second way is to install remote control software like RemotePC, TeamViewer or AnyDesk, just to name a few.

One rule should be followed in any cases: to avoid security leaks, users who work from home should not use sensitive company data on their private computers!
